FINANCIAL WELLNESS: THREE Costly Retirement Expenses People Often UNDERESTIMATE

The Executive's Wealth Advisor

No matter how much you've saved, expenses continue in retirement. Many underestimate the costs of healthcare, home maintenance, and the risk of outliving their savings. It is important not to overlook these expenses and to plan accordingly.

1. Home Maintenance

Paying off your mortgage before retirement is smart, but homeownership costs don't stop there. Home maintenance expenses remain one of the biggest costs, for example - painting, roof repairs, to appliance replacements and lawn care. All of these expenses can add up. It is imperative that you plan for ongoing upkeep to avoid financial strain.

2. Long-Term Healthcare

Even with health insurance, medical costs can rise dramatically. Insurance today isn't what it used to be. Out-of-pocket costs for medications, treatments, and potential long-term care can be substantial. Since health needs change with age, preparing for these expenses is essential.

3. Outliving Your Savings

Retirement today looks different than it did decades ago. With people living longer—sometimes into their 90s or beyond many people risk running out of money. Start saving as much as you can right now and invest in tax advantage accounts. Plan at least 20-30 years of expenses. Planning ahead and budgeting for these hidden costs can greatly impact your retirement security. It's wise to consult with a financial advisor early to create a solid plan.
